SPIES OF MANY NATIONSCROWD BALTIC PORTS

Heroes, Too, Smugglers, Exchange Gamblers and Fugitives There.

WOMEN IN THRONGS OF SECRET WORKERS

Special Correspondence to THE SUN. STOCKHOLM, Nov. 20 .- Just now the Baltic is the sea of adventure, mally it is a dull, insipid sea. war began the Baltic woke up a little, but its liveliness was limited by Grand Admiral Tirpitz's command of the sea. Now about ten British submarines, backed by some Russian submarines, have awakened the ordinarily quiet waters. All Baltic ports are nests of Stockholm ignores the war, but it is full of Russian and German jobbers who gamble in exchange. Copenhager s the chief centre of German espionage. The saloons and fourth rate hotels are thronged with German agents. Libau, since Von Hindenburg captured it las summer, is the headquarters of a German motorboat corps which does scouting in Riga Gulf. Hernosand, Oxelo sund and other small Swedish eastern ports are the homes of scores of marooned German merchant captains whose ships have been torpedoed or bottled up The liveliest places are Haparanda and Tornea, frontier townlets on the Tornea Elf River, which divides Sweden from Russian Finland. These townlets, thirty miles from the Arctic Circle, are glers and fugitive prisoners. The Rus sian gendarme Col. Abassoff discovered two German spies in Tornea last week With six gendarmes he pursued the sus pects to Karungi, further up the river, and besieged them in a house. After a two hours battle the two Germans

Spy Captured by Russians.

At Copenhagen the police brought aboard for transit to Russia an alleged thy. In the Baltic ports are swarms of purely military and naval spies who serve belligerent Governments, many "trade spies," and large numbers of spies of the neutral Baltic Powers The trade spies, all British, haunt commercial ports. Their function is to collect facts about Scandinavian firms trade with Germany, which firms trade, what they sell and to whom. London takes care that oversea goods consigned to Scandinavian firms which trade with Germany do not reach the firms. The trade spies pose as language teachers or drummers. Many have been expelled.
